The President
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President,

A managed peace prevails in the Taiwan Strait today, and business is thriving for those Taiwanese and mainland Chinese trading with each other. Taiwan and Mainland China inked the landmark Economic Cooperation Framework Agreement (ECFA) last summer, and freely elected Taiwan President Ma Ying-jeou has restarted institutionalized Cross-Strait talks. But even though tension between Taiwan and the mainland has considerably diminished, Beijing continues its military expansion and still has more than a thousand missiles aimed at Taiwan.

Mainland China's military threat to Taiwan is real. Hence the United States is correct to keep selling Taiwan weapons, a policy favored by an overwhelming majority of Taiwan's people who support maintaining the status quo between itself and mainland China. Taiwan's citizens and government rightly view the purchase of U.S. arms as an assurance the status quo will not be changed, thus allowing current bilateral exchanges and dialogue to continue without fear of undue risks to the island's security.

I concur with this view. It augurs for peace in the Pacific, and is in accordance with our obligations under the Taiwan Relations Act. I therefore, ask that you not to give in to China's request to reduce or to stop arms sales to Taiwan during his forthcoming January 19th-20th visit to Washington, D.C.

Sincerely,

Valerie Levin

Dear Foreign Policy and Defense LAs,

Senators Menendez and Inhofe, co-chairs of the Taiwan Caucus, plan to send the following letter to President Obama regarding Chinese President Hu's visit next week. It urges the President to keep in mind the U.S. commitment to Taiwan's security as laid out in the Taiwan Relations Act and to convey to President Hu that the U.S. remains committed to this policy position.

Dear President Obama:

As you prepare for the arrival of President Hu Jintao of the People's Republic of China (PRC), we urge you to remain mindful of the vital security interests of Taiwan. Taiwan is a strong democracy, a close trading partner, and a historic ally of the United States.

The United States and Taiwan have a long history of trade and friendship that we are pleased to have seen strengthen over the years. As faithful friends of Taiwan in the U.S. Senate, we ask that during President Hu's visit, you emphasize that the United States' position on Taiwan remains clear: the United States will support Taiwan's security, and continue to provide Taiwan with defensive arms.

The Taiwan Relations Act (TRA) rests upon the expectation that the future of Taiwan will be determined by peaceful means. The Act specifies that it is U.S. policy to consider any effort to determine the future of Taiwan by other than peaceful means to be a threat to the peace and security of the Western Pacific area, and of grave concern to the United States. It is U.S. policy to provide Taiwan with arms of a defensive character, and to maintain the capacity of the United States to resist any resort to force or other forms of coercion that would jeopardize the security, or the social or economic system, of the people on Taiwan.

The PRC has engaged in a large scale military build-up over the past few years and has not abandoned the threat of force, with an estimated 1,000 active missiles pointed directly at Taiwan. For these reasons, it is of utmost importance that President Hu understands the United States' unwavering commitment to providing Taiwan with the tools necessary for its self-defense.

We look forward to working with you to ensure Taiwan's security and further support this important U.S. ally.

Sincerely,
